

A white egret is captured in mid-flight, its wings fully extended, against a bright, golden sunset sky. The bird is positioned on the right side of the frame, with its long neck curved forward. The background is a soft, warm glow of orange and yellow, suggesting the sun is low on the horizon. The overall mood is serene and majestic.

Letter from the Vicar

A kind of limbo surrounds everything.

During the fifty days of Easter, the first disciples were often with Jesus, lost him at the Ascension, and then reunited with His Spirit at Pentecost. Similarly, during the month of May, we live in the hinterland between Jesus' death and resurrection (in April), and his Ascension and the return of His Spirit at Pentecost (in June). It feels like everything is the same yet nothing is the same.

This period between Easter Day and Pentecost is a metaphor for our Christian life. There is a sense that we have been redeemed by the Cross yet are waiting for the Spirit to confirm that gift. As a great saint once said: we have been forgiven, we are in the process of being forgiven, and we hope that one day we shall be forgiven.

As we explore forgiveness, we soon find our faith flitting into and out of focus. This adjusting of spiritual focus is God's way of stripping away that which is not of Him and replacing it with something more real.

Stated this way, the task of the Easter season is to explore our own forgiveness as a way of growing into discipleship. He wants us to take small steps of faith. While each step can feel like a huge risk, in fact the recent knowledge of the empty Easter Cross acts much like a safety net: He makes it safe for us to grow toward Him.

Wishing you joy as you grow into His forgiveness

My Lord God, I have no idea where I am going. I do not see the road ahead of me. I cannot know for certain where it will end. Nor do I really know myself, and the fact that I think I am following Your will does not mean that I am actually doing so. But I believe that the desire to please You does in fact please You. And I hope I have that desire in all that I am doing. I hope that I will never do anything apart from that desire.

And I know that, if I do this, You will lead me by the right road, though I may know nothing about it. Therefore I will trust you always though I may seem to be lost and in the shadow of death.

I will not fear, for You are ever with me, and You will never leave me to face my perils alone.

During Lent, many of us have been saving for Water Aid. We'll announce the amount we collected in the June magazine. The deadline is early May, please.

 WaterAid

On 29 March, a group of us from Church went to Mirfield Monastery to experience a quiet day, and what an experience it was! This was my first quiet day with the church. It was certainly memorable. We had the opportunity to sit in the services and partake in the Eucharist which was held in their astonishing Church. The remarkable service was sung by the brothers. As well as this beautiful service, we were delighted with a talk by Father Aiden, who discussed his nearly sixty-year time as a monk at Mirfield.

To top it off, I sat in their beautiful garden, reflecting on my faith and my relationship with God. It was an opportunity to discuss, reflect and take that one step away from everyday life.

It is an experience I will never forget, and I hope I have many more to come with St Barnabas.

Inclusive Church

We live in a world of glorious diversity. The Bible describes the Church as a worldwide communion of believers where 'there is neither Jew nor Gentile, neither slave nor free, nor is there male and female, for you are all one in Christ Jesus' (NIV, Galatians 3:28). The PCC has been exploring how we can be more inclusive and has recommended that we join a movement named Inclusive Church.

Inclusive Church is an educational charity (no. 1102676) founded in 2003. Although Anglican in origin, it now works with churches of many different denominations, encouraging them to explore ways in which they may become more inclusive. Churches that register with Inclusive Church are asked to adopt the following Statement of Belief.

We believe in inclusive Church — Church which does not discriminate, on any level, on grounds of economic power, gender, mental health, physical ability, race or sexuality. We believe in Church which welcomes and serves all people in the name of Jesus Christ; which is scripturally faithful; which seeks to proclaim the Gospel afresh for each generation; and which, in the power of the Holy Spirit, allows all people to grasp how wide and long and high and deep is the love of Jesus Christ.

As you can see, the statement expresses the strong conviction that the Church is for all people regardless of gender, race or sexual orientation. It calls on the Church to act justly, particularly in the appointment of clergy and bishops regardless of gender, race or sexual orientation. It calls for us to read the Scriptures rigorously and to respond to God's Word intelligently and thoughtfully so that we can use Scripture with deep understanding, care and dignity and not as a weapon for condemnation.

Churches that become members of Inclusive Church are asked to display the logo above, as designed by Martin Gwilliams. As people walk past our Church or look us up on the internet, they can see at a glance that we are willing to welcome anyone and everyone to share in the love of God and our Lord Jesus Christ.

In just over a week, I'm going to Rome! I've been a couple of times before and done the whole touristy 'three coins in a fountain' bit (which obviously worked), but this time it will be more of a pilgrimage, as the itinerary includes visiting important sites of special significance to Christians.

Among other things, we will be visiting Mother Theresa's little cell at the Convent of the Missionaries of Charity, where one of the sisters who knew her, will address us.

Slightly off the usual tourist route, we will be going to one of Rome's earliest churches — the Church of Saint Paul at the Three Fountains (Chiesa del martirio di San Paolo alle Tre Fontane) where tradition tells that, because Paul was a Roman citizen, he was beheaded rather than crucified. The story was passed down that his head bounced three times on the ground, and at each spot a spring appeared.

We will also visit the Basilica of Santa Croce where various relics collected by the Emperor Constantine's Mother Helena are to be found. These include the panel which was hung on Christ's Cross; two thorns from the Crown of Thorns; part of a nail; the index finger of St Thomas; and three small wooden pieces of the True Cross.

Rome, the 'Eternal City', has been a sacred place and internationally important city since ancient times. It is a place St Peter and St Paul visited and where they died and, of course, many early Christians were martyred for their faith and for refusing to worship the Emperor.

In the words of Pope Benedict: 'To go on a pilgrimage really means to step out of ourselves in order to encounter God where he has revealed himself, where his grace has shone with particular splendour and produced rich fruits of conversion and holiness among those who believe.'

My hopes for this visit are that it will be refreshing and holy: a chance to relax and enjoy fellowship with my fellow 'pilgrims', but also a time for prayer and meditation as I continue to prepare for my ordination to the priesthood next month.

Please pick up one of my 'Ember' cards at the back of church (which has details of the 'when' and 'where' of the ordination service) and hold me in your prayers thank you.

Introduction Haggai is the tenth of the twelve prophets in the Old Testament. These twelve prophets are sometimes called ‘the minor prophets’ because their writings are brief rather than a consequence of their importance. Haggai is the second shortest book in the Old Testament (only Obadiah is shorter), and is quoted in the New Testament once (Heb 12:26).

The book consists of four prophecies delivered over a four-month period during the second year of the Persian King Darius I the Great (521 BC).

Author Haggai was a prophet (1:1). His name means ‘festal’, maybe suggesting he was born during one of the three great pilgrimage feasts. His ministry was short, lasting only four months. There is some evidence that Haggai witnessed the destruction of Solomon’s temple (2:3) but, if so, he must have been in his 70s when writing. Alternatively, a different Prophet took his master’s name for this book.

The date The book of Haggai was written 70 years after the Babylonian exile. The book was compiled soon after the events in the book occurred.

Background King Nebuchadnezzar deported the Jewish people to Babylon in 597 BC following his first invasion. A second major deportation occurred in 586 BC soon after the Jerusalem Temple was destroyed.

Much later, in 538 BC, King Cyrus of Persia conquered Babylon (2 Chron 36:21–24, Ezra 1:1–4). He adopted a policy of local identity and self-rule, and allowed the Jewish people to return to Jerusalem. Cyrus told them to rebuild their temple (Ezra 1:2–4; 6:3–5), so this period is known as the Second Temple period. The Second Temple was begun in 520 BC under King Darius of Persia and completed in 516 BC. The Books of Nehemiah and Ezra also describe the Restoration of Israel.

The governor of Judah, Zerubbabel, and Joshua the Priest led about 50,000 Jews back to Jerusalem. They immediately started rebuilding the Temple, and completed the foundation within two years (Ezra 3:8–11). Their success upset their Samaritan neighbours, who feared the political and religious implications of a thriving Jewish state with a rebuilt Temple. The Samaritans opposed the project, and managed to halt work until about 520 BC, when Darius the Great became King of Persia (Ezra 4:1–5,24).

The Book of Haggai Haggai’s prophecy is a two-fold challenge to Israel after the Exile in Babylon: they must remain faithful to God and must rebuild the Temple (Ezra 5:1–2; 6:14).

Haggai was sure that Babylon was able to conquer Israel because its people had broken their covenant with God. He therefore challenged the exiles to choose obedience and repent. He condemned injustice and idolatry, and reiterated the laws of ritual purity, telling the people to humble themselves and reject injustice and spiritual apathy. He reminded the would-be rebuilders of Jerusalem to give God their allegiance and build the Temple before they started constructing homes for themselves.

Haggai assured the returning exiles that if they repented, God would fulfil His promise to establish a New Jerusalem and would defeat evil from among the nations.

Oscar Arnulfo Romero was born into a family of ten in 1917, in El Salvador. His father was in charge of the local telegraph office. Sometimes the young Oscar helped his father to deliver telegrams. He learned to be a carpenter, making tables, chairs and doors. He was a quick learner and talented, but it surprised no one when the young Oscar said he wanted to be a priest.

Oscar entered a local seminary at the early age of 13. Later, when his mother was ill and they needed money for medicine, Oscar left the seminary for three months to work in the gold mine in Potosí, where he earned about 4p a day. He returned to the seminary, then completed his studies in Rome. He had to wait a year to be ordained because he was younger than the required age. His father and brother died while he was in Rome.

Oscar was ordained in 1942, and returned to South America to become a parish priest in Anamorós. He moved to San Miguel, where he remained for 20 years. He embraced a simple lifestyle and was soon famous for his sermons but also did a lot of parish work visiting prisons, organising catechism classes and working with others in the Church to provide help and food for the poor.

Oscar was appointed secretary of the Bishops' Conference for El Salvador in 1966, and became an auxiliary bishop in 1970. In 1974, he was appointed Bishop to the poor, rural region of Santiago de María. He became Archbishop of San Salvador in 1977.

Oscar Romero's ministry was distinguished by a particular attention to the most poor and marginalised. In a famous sermon he asked, 'When I help the poor, they call me a saint. Why then, when I ask why they are poor, do they call me a communist?'

All this time, violence was increasing in El Salvador as the United States funded right-wing extremists to counter the 'communists' they feared south of their border. Soon, the El Salvador government were killing those who stood up for their rights. Death squads committed murder in the cities while soldiers killed as they wished in the countryside.

Oscar continued to speak out against social injustice, poverty, assassinations and torture. He demanded justice and recompense for all the atrocities committed by the army and police, and he set up projects and pastoral programmes to support the victims. He became a catalyst for radical moral prophecy both inside the Church and out. The press attacked him vehemently and called him a communist. He knew his life was in danger but he continued.

The death threats multiplied and the atmosphere was charged. In a sermon on 23 March 1980, Oscar ordered the army to stop their killing. He said, 'In the name of God, and in the name of this suffering people whose cries rise to heaven more loudly each day, I beg you, I implore you, I order you, in the name of God, stop the repression!' He was murdered the very next day while celebrating Holy Communion in the chapel of the Hospital of Divine Providence. Many believe his murder was funded by the US Government.

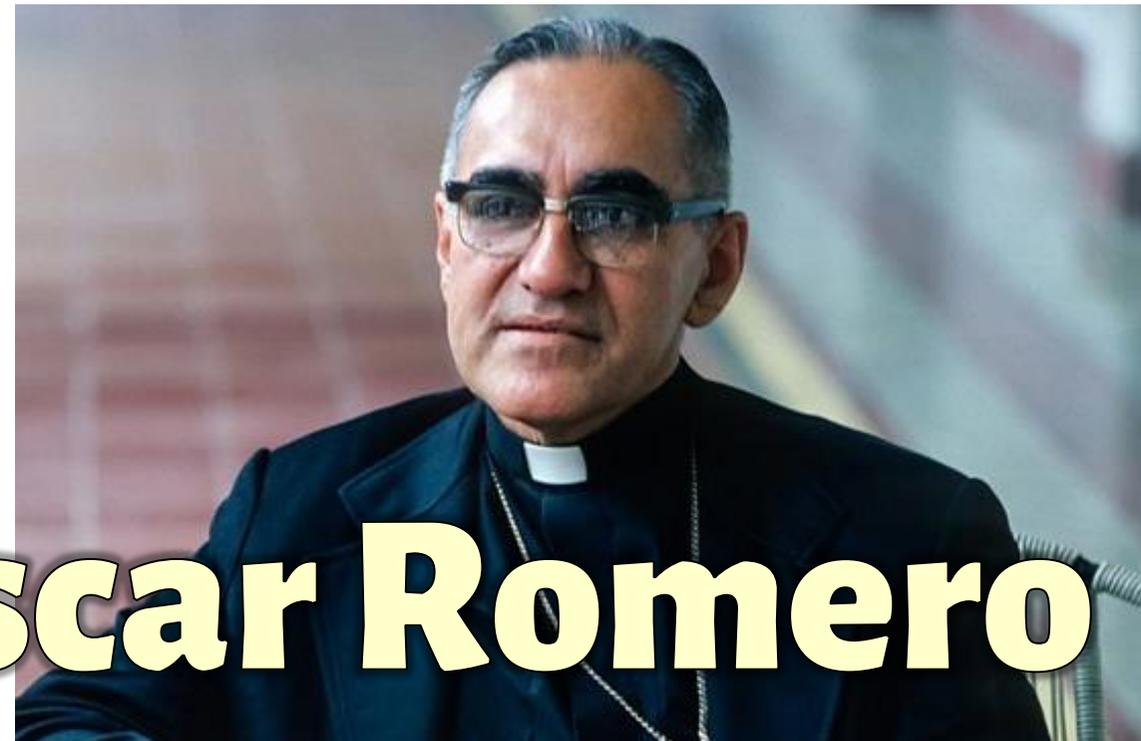

His funeral was celebrated on Palm Sunday. He was later declared a martyr of the Church, beatified in 2015 and canonised in 2018.
